Overcoming Photographer's Block

Have you ever felt that you just don't have your photo mojo? Not inspired to pick up your camera and go shoot? In this issue, we'll explore resources for getting your photo juices flowing again.

The Adorama Camera ezine 42 West offers 11 suggestions for overcoming a creative block. The complete article is found at this link, but here is a summary of a few of their top tips:

1. Assign your self a photo project, such as shooting only black and white for a week, or shooting a self-portrait each day for a month.
2. Shoot the same subject 100 different ways. This will really push your creativity as you consider different angles, lighting, positions and placement.
3. Look for inspiration in books, magazines, or online.
4. Take a class.
5. Enter a contest.
6. (Not in the article) Submit some photos for show and tell at your local camera club meeting!
